BLUE SKYE THINKING
CHILDREN'S BRAIN TUMOUR CHARITY

We need your help to create a loomstallation at the John Radcliffe Children's Hospital!

OUR MISSION

When five year old Skye Hall was diagnosed with a brain tumour, he aimed to create the longest loomband chain in the galaxy and received nationwide support. 30,000m later, he secured a Guinness World Record and drew attention to the lack of research into childhood brain tumours.

He is the inspiration behind the children's charity Blue Skye Thinking which supports research into the treatment of the no.1 cancer killer in children.

Skye is no longer with us. To commemorate his dedication and bravery we want to incorporate his loombands in an interactive art installation. Which will provide endless entertainment for the kids undergoing treatment at the John Radcliffe Children's Hospital.

LOOMSTALLATION is made up of interactive cogs, full of Skye's loombands, to provide hours of entertainment and distraction for patients.

GET INVOLVED

To make our vision a reality, each of these cogs needs a sponsor. By sponsoring you will be part of an incredible force bringing joy to these young patients, and supporting vital research.

Our Loomstallation will be made up of an amazing 200 limited edition cogs! So we are calling on all Space Cadets to join our mission before blast-off on 30th Sempember 2018.

INDIVIDUALS

When you sponsor a cog, not only will you have your own wheel in our art installation, for which you will receive a certificate and photograph of your cog, but also a virtual one on our 'supporters' website. Here, you will have the opportunity to dedicate the cog to a loved one.

BUSINESSES

You will have the opportunity to add your business, or organisation's name and logo on a virtual cog on our website. You will receive a certificate and photograph of your personal cog and be invited to the grand opening at the hospital. What's more, you can even share your cog with your followers across social media.

Do you love getting creative?
